

For Immediate Release

Wall Street Institute offer Free English Courses to Linguaphone students

(HK • 21st January, 2009) Wall Street Institute is the largest specialist English language institute in the world. Today Wall Street Institute announced to offer free English courses to all current Linguaphone English students to encourage them to continue their studies.

Ms. Faye Man, General Manager of Wall Street Institute, said, "Being the largest registered specialist English language institute in Hong Kong, we aim to encourage citizens to improve their English. We would like to help all Linguaphone English course students to continue their studies by offering them free tuition at Wall Street Institute."

From now till 31st March, 2009, any Linguaphone English course students may visit any one of Wall Street Institute centres and enroll on any course free of charge for up to a 6 month period. To qualify for this offer, students must bring their valid receipt to any centre. HK$500 will be charged for administration fees and teaching materials. For further details, please visit our website <http://wallstreet.edu.hk>, or call our hotline 2575 6888.

According to an article published in Saturday's newspaper, Legislative Councilor, Mr. Cheung Man Kwong, said the Education Bureau will not be responsible for monitoring any schools or institutions which are not registered. This includes course qualities, teachers' qualifications and the safety of the study locations. Wall Street Institute would like to advise anyone who is interested in studying in the future should choose their course and school carefully, especially the validation and the background of the school. For those who would like to check the validity and related information of schools, please visit the following website: <http://www.edb.gov.hk/index.aspx?nodeid=1488&langno=1>.

Before applying for any courses, you should consider at least the content of the course, teachers' qualifications, learning methods and course support, etc. For example, whether the course is only limited to studying online, the number of classes, whether it is one-way learning or interactive media which may influence our achievement directly.

All 5 centres of Wall Street Institute are registered with the Education Bureau (EDB) (The current registration of Jordan centre is in progress due to its recent relocation). It is the only English Institution which has been awarded with ISO9001:2000 international accreditation in Hong Kong. Wall Street Institute has always provided premium English courses for the community. It is also the biggest provider of official BULATS (Business Language Testing Services) agent authorized by the University of Cambridge in Hong Kong.

With 37 years of professional experience in English Language teaching, Wall Street Institute provides 100% results guaranteed premium English courses to English learners in 28 countries. All of our professional teachers are certified. Wall Street Institute based its unique MultiMethod® on the natural way of acquiring languages, combined with an interactive learning system, and small group classes, conversational classes and various student outings. Wall Street Institute makes learning English no different from acquiring the natural mother tongue. Studying at Wall Street Institute is the best way to speak English with confidence.
